

Democracy and Cultural Diversity in Indonesia

June 24 – July 7, 2018

This study abroad program is coordinated by the Northern Illinois University Study Abroad Office (SAO), in cooperation with the NIU College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, Department of Political Science, the NIU Center for Southeast Asian Studies and, and the Gadjah Mada University (UGM).

PROGRAM DATES: The program will officially begin on Sunday, June 24, 2018 in Yogyakarta, and will end on Saturday, July 7, 2018. Students will be responsible for making their own air travel arrangements in order to arrive in Yogyakarta by no later than 5pm on Sunday, June 24. A shuttle pickup at the Yogyakarta Adisucipto International Airport will be arranged for the students to take them to the hotel.

Students enrolled in the program are required to participate in pre- and post-program classes. Dates for the classes are to be determined.

PROGRAM DIRECTOR: Kikue Hamayotsu, Associate Professor of Political Science in the NIU College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, and faculty associate at the NIU Center for Southeast Asian Studies, is a political scientist whose expertise include politics and religion, Southeast Asian politics, identity politics and state-society relations in the Muslim world. Her current research interest is focused on religious intolerance and freedom in the context of democratic transition in the Muslim-majority Southeast Asian states. She has extensive living and working experiences in Indonesia and Malaysia. She is currently Vice President (President-elect) of the American Institute for Indonesian Studies (AIFIS) and also serves on the Executive Board of the Indonesia and Timor Leste Studies Committee (ITLSC). She has held a research/teaching position at the MacMillan Center for International and Area Studies, Yale University, the Weatherhead East Asian Studies, Columbia University, the Asian Research Institute (ARI), National University of Singapore, and the Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS), Jakarta.

PROGRAM OVERVIEW/OBJECTIVES: The primary objective of this program is to provide participants with the opportunity to gain firsthand living and field experiences in Indonesia, the largest Muslim-majority democracy in the world, which is known for its moderate and multi-cultural traditions and thriving economy. Students will be provided with a range of opportunities not only to visit historical heritage sites, monuments, and museums, but also to directly interact with local communities and university students through daily activities and excursions coordinated by local universities in Yogyakarta with the program director. Through those daily activities, excursions, group discussions, lectures and interviews around the city, students will learn about broader political development, the socio-economic conditions of majority and minority communities, and the historical background of religious and ethnic conflict and reconciliation in the country so as to gain a better understanding of urgent contemporary issues related to democracy, multi-culturalism, minority rights, political Islam, ethnic conflict, gender issues, and civil society.

PROGRAM SITE(S): The program will take place in Yogyakarta (popularly known as Jogja), the capital city of the Special Region of Yogyakarta, Central Java, Indonesia. Known for its historical religious heritages, arts and traditional textile industries (batik), educational center, and multi-cultural and moderate Islamic traditions, the city is one of the most popular sites for visitors, local and foreigner alike. It will offer easy access to historical heritage sites such as the Buddhist monument “Borobudur”, Hindu temple complex “Prambanan,” royal palaces (kraton or sultan’s residence complex), as well as traditional Islamic schools (madrasah and pesantren) run by prominent Muslim movements. Jogja also houses a number of prominent educational institutions and programs and NGOs working on religious pluralism and conflict resolution. It will offer an ideal place for students to observe and learn firsthand local religious and cultural practices, rituals, and values and how these interact with political and socio-economic development. Program participants will stay in an accommodation located on Gadjah Mada University (UGM) campus, and participate in various daily activities and excursions around the city coordinated by local universities, the American Institute for Indonesian Studies (AIFIS) Yogyakarta office and the program director.

HIGHLIGHTS: Main activities of the program include not only lectures and presentations by guest speakers from local universities, government agencies, religious organizations and NGOs, but also visits to local universities (e.g., UGM, Indonesian Islamic University) to hold group discussions and interviews with local students on selected topics concerning current international affairs. Daily excursions will also be arranged to visit mosques, traditional religious schools, art exhibitions, cultural and music performances, historical sites and museums, royal palaces and nearby villages to observe local industries and other socio-economic activities such as the making of the traditional textile called batik. In addition to those daily activities around the city, a weekend tour to historical heritage sites outside the city, Borobudur and Prambanan temple complexes, will be arranged.

PROGRAM AUDIENCE: Space is limited and qualified applicants will be accepted on a first-come-first-serve basis. The program is open to all students both at undergraduate and graduate levels from NIU and other fully accredited colleges and universities, including non-traditional students and professionals interested in international and comparative politics and Southeast Asian studies in general, and Indonesia, religion and politics, ethnic conflict, and Islam in particular. Students who are learning or planning to learn the Indonesian language are also encouraged to participate in conjunction with their language training.

INSTRUCTION METHOD: Weekday seminar sessions (5-day/per week) are normally held in a meeting room in the hostel located on UGM campus and include daily seminars and lectures by the program director (Professor Hamayotsu) and guest speakers/lecturers invited from local universities and organizations. Half-day activities outside the campus are arranged daily with local universities and organizations. Those activities include group discussions and interviews on selected topics and issues with local students, as well as visits to local religious communities and organizations, historical sites and museums, cultural performances and exhibitions, civil society organizations, government agencies, and nearby villages and communities. Students will have opportunities to collaborate with local students and conduct “fieldwork” through those daily activities and mini excursions and be asked to present their activities and field findings in the seminar sessions while preparing brief reports and their individual research projects, which they will submit to complete the program.
