

NIU COLLEGE OF LAW SUMMER PROGRAM

AGEN, FRANCE

MAY 30 - JULY 10, 2019*

The NIU College of Law Summer Program in Agen, France is approved and accredited by the American Bar Association. This will be the 24th annual summer program offered by Northern Illinois University's College of Law, the Université Bordeaux, and the NIU Study Abroad Office.

PROGRAM DATES: The program will officially begin in Agen, France on Thursday, May 30, 2019. Students will be responsible for making their own air travel arrangements for arrival in Agen on May 30 in time for an introductory reception at 6:00 PM and dinner to follow at L'Imprevu. There will be a final dinner on July 9. *Students may depart Agen on Wednesday, July 10 or Thursday July 11, 2019. Please note that a flight on July 10 may necessitate departing Agen the night before or very early in the morning.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES: This program is designed to give non-French speaking students an understanding of the French civil law system and the legal system of the European Union. Language of instruction is English. Classes will be conducted at the facilities of the Juridical Studies Center of Agen (Université Bordeaux).

PROGRAM DIRECTOR: Professor David Taylor is the director of the program. He is a Distinguished Teaching Professor and serves as the Director for Skills Training at the College of Law, where he teaches Civil Procedure, Evidence and Trial Advocacy. His teaching interests lie in the French Civil Law System, with an emphasis on French court systems inquisitorial trial process.

David Taylor

FRENCH FACULTY: A major strength of the Agen program is that it makes extensive use of French law faculty and practitioners to offer lectures on selected topics. Regular lecturers come from the University of Bordeaux, the University of Paris, and the Agen practicing bar. Students are exposed to the study of law in the European fashion where the lecture/discussion mode predominates over the American case presentation method. The American faculty are present and participating when their French colleagues are lecturing.

Professor Sébastien Platon is the French academic director in Agen and will lecture in the program this year. He is a professor of French and European public law at the Université Bordeaux and a member of the Center for Research and European and International Documents. He is a specialist in the law of the European Union.

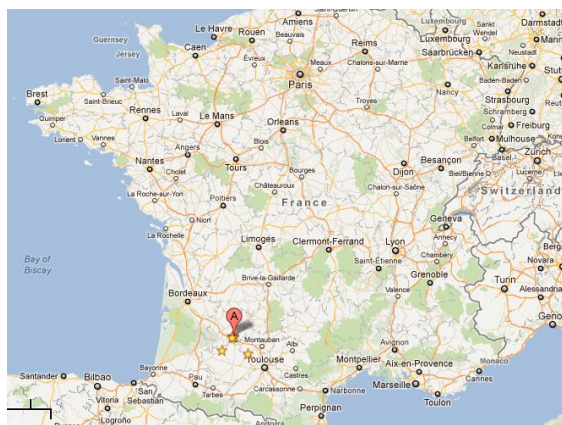

Additional NIU Faculty: It is anticipated that other members of the College of Law faculty will join the program and offer class sessions. These may include Professor David Rosenfeld, as well as other College of Law faculty.

FIELD TRIPS: Both academic and leisure field trips are being planned as part of the program. Past academic trips have included court observation in both local and national courts (Agen and Paris), “behind the scenes” presentations at the French Senate and National Assembly, the French Supreme Court, and National Council in Paris; and a visit to the national judicial school in Bordeaux. Past leisure trips have included visits to the mountains and the Atlantic beaches. As part of the total experience of immersion into the study of law abroad, bi-lingual French law students may also accompany American law students on many field trips and social outings.

JURIDICAL STUDIES CENTER OF AGEN: The university buildings in Agen are quite new (entirely rebuilt and renewed in 1994), accessible to persons with disabilities, and provide spacious classrooms. The Center’s administrative offices are within close proximity of the classrooms and students may contact the Center staff for assistance of any type.

AGEN is located on the Garonne River, in the Aquitaine region. Agen was originally the capital of a Gallic tribe conquered by Julius Caesar and an important Roman trading center. Later it was made the capital of the county of Agenais. Agen became the seat of a bishopric in the 10th century; construction of the cathedral here was begun during the 12th century. Agen is a rich agricultural area, famous for its prunes (pruneaux d'Agen), renaissance mansions with art museums, and the Saint-Caprais Cathedral. More information on Agen can be found at <http://www.destination-agen.com/eng/visite/visite.htm>.

Aquitaine Region: The region's history began thousands of years ago when Cro-Magnon man lived in the caves of the Périgord and left cave paintings in sites such as Lascaux and Les Eyzies. More recent remnants of Aquitaine's history date from the time of Eléonore of Aquitaine, consort of Louis VII, King of France. When she married Henry Plantagenet, who became King of England in 1154, there began several centuries of conflict between the French and English for control of Aquitaine. Today, the fortified villages and castles built during this time offer charm to the winding countryside and provide interesting stops along the road.

ACADEMIC CREDIT: For satisfactory participation in the program, participants will receive a Certificate of Completion from NIU College of Law for six hours of law school credit. Course performance will be evaluated by the NIU faculty in the same manner in which on campus courses are evaluated. The courses taken while participating in this program cannot be audited. Participation in a summer study abroad program is unlikely to accelerate graduation.

LAW 699: Civil Law and Civil Lawyers: The French Experience	3 semester hours
Description: What England is to the Common Law world, France is to the other great legal tradition: the Civil Law. This course is a focused, in-depth examination of the French legal system in action. Selections from Code Civil and other texts are examined, particularly as they relate to the unique structure and functioning of the French system of judicial, administrative and constitutional jurisdictions. The distinctively different role of judges in a non-common law system is examined as are the roles, formation and ethics of the various French legal professions. Judges and lawyers are also observed in on-site court sessions. Selected topics in French substantive law are studied from a comparative perspective.

LAW 699B: The Legal System of the European Union	3 semester hours
Description: The legal system of the European Union overlays the domestic legal systems of France and other European Union member states. This course examines the development of the legal and institutional structure of the European Union from the Treaty of Paris (1951) through the Treaties of Rome (1956), Maastrich (1993), Amsterdam (1999), Nice (2003), and subsequent treaties. In addition, this course considers the relationship of the law of the European Union to the domestic law of the member states and examines selected substantive aspects of European Union Law.
